Attractive Country Roads.

At the West we rarely see a country road that has much attractiveness about it, save in the newly-settled portions, where men have not had time to commit the wholesale sacrilege of destroying every tree and shrub. There is no reason why our roads should not be made as pleasant as our farms. They can be at little expense. Leave the work of beautifying them to Nature every year she makes an effort to do what man fights against persistently. Trees start up along the fences, and shrubs take shelter behind old logs, and stones, and stumps, and make an effort to obtain a foothold there. If these could be left to grow, it would not be long before a now bare and cheerless strip of road would become a over it, a constant succession of delight- to protect. ful views would be afforded, and the eye and the mind would enjoy the variety.

I wish I could prevail on every roadmaster to leave a tree here and there, to grow, in a few years, into a beauty and a blessing. Let them make nooks corners. I do not mean that they and refused to reappear in the trial. should allow every bush to grow, until the road-side becomes a thicket, but that a few of the many Nature has planted should be left to help break up the monotony of the highway.

We lose sight of the beautiful in our efforts to "get ahead." They understand these things better in the Old World, where nothing is more beautiful and picturesque than bits of roadside scenery, usually bordered by green hedges.

The Missouri Wheat Crop.

counties in Missouri and in the West, and its crop is always eagerly sought for by millers for making choice flour. As might be expected the present crop is of unusual size and quality. The Journal says "the demand for sacks is far beyond the supply, and the railroad men are not supplying anything like an adequate number of cars to do the shipping, so the steamboats are coming bought 60,000 bushels to be delivered may give her some satisfaction. this month. The farmers are selling direct from the field at 95 cents to $1 a bushel. The demand for sacks is so great that the sacks are carried to the country as fast as received, before they reach the warehouse. Mr. A. Stonebreaker of St. Charles says in an experience of twenty-four years as a buyer of wheat he has not seen a finer crop in quantity or quality. He estimates that the crop in the county will go 300,000 bushels over that of any previous year. Another dealer says it is the choicest erop since 1864, "the color of the grain is very fine-never better."

The papers from nearly every county in the State bring similar reports. Just now threshing is going on night and day, the object of farmers being to get "You shet your mouf, you little fool! their grain in market as soon as possi- You'll make dis mule run off and ble; and in a few weeks the railroads kill us boaf." will have more mork than they can do for six months to come.-Republi-

More Sheep Needed.

There are many reasons why our farmers should raise more sheep. All who have done so have realized that they are among the most valuable and profitable of the productions of the farm. So little expense comparatively farm. So little expense comparatively per box. For sale by J. It is vis, Ironton, Mo. said that the proportion of sheep to the population is decreasing, and that this is especially the case this year, the drouth of last year putting the ewes in such condition that they were anable to healthfully suckle their young.

The decrease in the number of marketable sheep will not only affect the supply and price of mutton, but it will also affect the supply and price of wool, the insufficiency of the home supply of which is indicated by the fact that we import millions of pounds annually for the absolute wants of manufacturers.

Many young girls are unfit for active life, and thousands of mothers drag out a miserable existence on account of a peculiar female weakness which they absolutely refuse to cure. They are full of aches and pains, are poor weak, frail creatures, irregular each are poor weak, frail creatures, irregular each month—with pale faces, glaring eyes, shattered nerves, and almost worn out constitutions. A powerful combination has been prepared by the medical profession for the cure of these scrious female complaints, and its action is pronounced wonderful.
